" ONE NIGHT IN PARIS " ✓

Jacques Fromage seeks to escape the fair sex by taking rooms in the home of Mme. Durand. He has had many affairs of the heart, but had never seen the girl he wanted to marry until he saw Mme. Durand's charming daughter, Clara. But she is affianced to Felix Cloque, a stupid fellow, and everyone looks forward to the wedding but Clara. One day she rebels and breaks the engagement, upsetting both families exceedingly.

Jacques takes Clara to a performance at the Comedie Francaise, but does not succeed very well as a lover because Clara is offended at a remark she overheard Jacques make (but which he didn't really mean), that he wouldn't marry the best girl living. During the evening Mme. Durand had been listening to gossip about Jacques, and when they came home she told Jacques she never wanted her daughter to see him again. Of course that drove Clara into Jacques' arms, which was what each really wanted anyway.
